DEPARTMENT OF CINEMA

This catalog is the first of a new kind of catalog with the copy printed at high speed by computer as explained below. This technique was developed under a research project to the Cinema Department from the United States Office of Education. The Director of this project was Glenn McMurry, Head of the Film Distribution Division of the Department of Cinema. He was assisted by Research Associate, Charles J. Vento; Film Librarian, George A. Wehbi; and Programmer and Systems Analyst, Leonard M. Lodico. Our grateful thanks also go to Dr. James D. Finn who gave it continual support and wise counsel.

The Cinema Department is grateful to these men and to the many others who worked on this project and are continuing to work and improve the techniques. These people have brought great credit to themselves, to the Cinema Department and to the University of Southern California.

We hope the users of this catalog find it practical and useable. We would certainly appreciate any suggestions you may have regarding it.

Very truly yours,

Bernard R. Kantor

Catalog Design by DON FIGGE

foreword

The copy used to photo-offset this film catalog was the output from an INTERNATIONAL BUSINESS MACHINES 1403 printer. The print-out for the alphabetical listing required 35 minutes and for the subject matter listing 5 minutes. It has been reduced one-third from the original IBM typeface. The line is 54 spaces in length. The material itself—title, annotations and bio-data—is a product of the SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA AUTOMATED CATALOGING PROJECT done in cooperation with the AUDIO-VISUAL EDUCATION ASSOCIATION OF CALIFORNIA—SOUTHERN SECTION (AVEAC-SS).

This project is supported by a grant from the United States Department of Health, Education and Welfare—Office of Education. The grant is issued under Contract No. OE-4-16-031 of the National Defense Education Act, Titles III and VII. The purpose as stated in the project is:

"To investigate the feasibility, problems, costs and details related to establishing an automated cataloging service concerned with audio-visual materials of use to eight counties in Southern California; to compare the computerized cataloging service with alternative types of cataloging; to report the study in such a way that interested persons elsewhere in the United States may determine the applicability of computerized cataloging systems to their needs."

Catalogs such as this are obtained electronically from an alphabetical compilation of over 5,000 titles stored on magnetic tape by the 1401 IBM computer made available by THE GRADUATE SCHOOL OF BUSINESS at the University of Southern California.

All titles are "pulled" by a single call-card system, using a unique comparing routine. No serial numbers are used. To obtain a title for print-out, the title, media, time, distributor and producer codes are compared and matched exactly. This matching insures positive accuracy throughout. When material is added to the master AUTOMATED CATALOGING tape file, the same comparing order is used. If any one of the above-mentioned items is unequal, the record is entered as being new. All types of media are acceptable to the system.

Series titles and title listings within each series are prepared by the computer. In any given catalog, only the appropriate film titles appear in a series listing.

Rental and sales prices for films are computed from a stored program which can take into account a number of exceptional situations.

The subject matter listing is prepared by a simple card file procedure, using cards identical to the call cards that produced the alphabetical listing.

The directory of distributor, producer and made-by codes is printed by the computer. Only the codes used in any given catalog appear in its directory.

Although certain aspects of the AUTOMATED CATALOGING PROJECT may be used on card data processing systems, such as the IBM 407, we have confined ourselves to the 1401 IBM symbolic programming system. We are also experimenting with the feasibility of applying the Common Business Orientated Language (COBOL) programming system to cataloging problems. The intent of this project is to develop programming for other makes and models of data processing equipment.

general information

ALL NEW CATALOG

This catalog supercedes all other copies of film catalogs and/or supplements of film catalogs which you may have in your files from the University of Southern California.

HOW TO ORDER FILMS

When requesting films, please specify the title and date of showing. If possible, give alternate dates and titles. Order early (at least three weeks). Booking requests should be in the name of the individual, institution or organization using the materials, and should be signed by the person who will be responsible for the film.

Address requests to:

FILM DISTRIBUTION DIVISION
University of Southern California
University Park
Los Angeles, California 90007

Phone: 213/746-2238
